The Adobe Lodge, currently serving as the University Faculty and Staff Club, was built in 1822 and is the only adobe brick building remaining from the original Santa Clara Mission establishment. The Adobe Lodge was completely restored in 1981. Its design of adobe walls and tile roof is consistent with that which the Franciscan Fathers used in all the California Missions.

The paintings displayed in the main dining room of the Adobe Lodge portray the rich history of the Santa Clara Valley. As one faces the head table, the paintings to the right were painted in the 1880s by Jesuit Brother Tortore, who served as an art instructor at the University of Santa Clara from 1878 to 1904. To the left is another set of paintings from 100 years later, painted by Professor Peter Pierson in the 1980's. As a former Chair of the History Department at Santa Clara University, Professor Pierson is both an artist and an historian.
