

COURSE AVAILABILITY

<http://www.scu.edu/courseavail/>

The CourseAvail Web site provides access to class data for past, current and forthcoming terms, and course descriptions (where available). CourseAvail's data is updated every minute (approximately) from the University's administrative system database, and so the information presented in CourseAvail's search results may vary from the data displayed in ECampus.

Seats

From the CourseAvail home page, you can enter a "quick" or "advanced" search. To enter a quick search, you can submit a 5-digit class number, a subject abbreviation (ENGL), or subject and course number (ENGL 11), or a full subject description (English). The quick search will always search against the most active term's data ("most active" is the term most frequently selected by CourseAvail users). The advanced search gives you more control over the selection of records.

The class details display, which is shown when a 5-digit class number is selected, includes a description from the University Bulletin (if available).

Schedule

The Schedule search interface allows you to select a subject (or multiple subjects) from a specific school for a specified term. The search results will be group by undergraduate and graduate classes, and then grouped by subject. You can modify the sort order of the search results by clicking on the label at the top of a column (Class, Number, Title, etc.).

Additional Features:

Facebook Watch List

You can now save a list of classes to watch using the CourseAvail app on Facebook. CourseAvail on Facebook includes the same up-to-date information about scheduled classes and available seats, and also allows you to share and view Watch Lists with your friends on Facebook.

Printing Schedule

To build a custom schedule, start by selecting a Term and School, then select one or more items from the Subject and/or Core menus.

To select multiple items from the Subject and Core menus, press the Control key and click on each item (use Command/click on a Mac).

Fall 2009 Undergraduate Schedule of Classes

College of Arts & Sciences

Anthropology

Course	Number	Title	Units	Core 2008-	Core 2009+	Days	Times	Instructor	Room	Seats*
ANTH 11A	50015	Cultures and Ideas I : Peace & Violence	4.00	UC30	F_CII	MWF	15:30-16:35	Westermarck,George D	OCONR 110	1

Footnotes: Peace & Violence will offer a two-course sequence that explores the critical role that these dimensions of conflict resolution have played in human societies. Central to the course is understanding how elements of peace and violence are interwoven in complex ways through all cultures. The historical dimension is critical for both classes since we must underline how patterns of peace and violence vary over time and how events of the past are culturally immersed in peace and violence patterns of the present. The course will emphasize broad global interconnections. Offered fall 2009 and winter 2010.

Art History

Course	Number	Title	Units	Core 2008-	Core 2009+	Days	Times	Instructor	Room	Seats*
ARTH 11A	50121	Cultures and Ideas I : Art, Politics & Propaganda	4.00	UC30	F_CII	MWF	10:30-11:35	Maxwell,Kathleen E	LUCAS 206	Closed

Footnotes: Art, Politics & Propaganda - This two-quarter course addresses two artistic styles usually considered antithetical; classical art of ancient Greece developed in the 5th century B.C.E. and Islamic art which first appears over 1000 years later in the 7th C.E. Classical art and culture serve as the foundation of what is known as the Western canon and Islamic art is often juxtaposed to it as one of a number of "non-Western" (i.e., Oriental) forms of artistic expression. Our first goal is to appreciate their differences and to recognize significant areas of cross-fertilization. We shall discover that classical culture played as important a role in the formation of Islamic culture as it did in Western culture. We will ask what did the classical style symbolize to those who resurrected it in so many neoclassical episodes throughout history? How often can neoclassicism be linked to political goals? Offered fall 2009 and winter 2010.
