Understanding Race and Racism Today: A Conversation with Christina Mora

Race remains a salient category in contemporary life and politics, and various manifestations of racism continue to plague efforts to forge a more just society. Yet, even among well-educated and politically progressive people, it is not always easy to fully grasp the meaning of race and as well as how taken-for-granted racial distinctions perpetuate socio-political inequality, economic disparity and even violence. Jerome Baggett will engage Prof. Mora in a conversation to clarify such matters and help us to understand racial dynamics more clearly.
